Improving Diagnosis in Health Care - PubMed

The growing recognition of health care as a team-based activity has led to greater collaboration among health care professionals, both intra- and interprofessionally (IOM, 2001; Josiah Macy Jr. Foundation and Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, 2010). These four movements have collectively transformed the way that health care is provided in the United States, and progress toward improving diagnosis and reducing diagnostic errors is a natural outgrowth of these movements.
